The 12th CJK Cooperation Dialogue

Enhancing Trilateral Cooperation Amid Shared Economic Challenges

It is our great pleasure to welcome you back to Tokyo for this event, after three years since 2022. We are truly delighted to see you again.

In the years since, the world has undergone significant changes. The war in Ukraine with Russia's invasion occurred then shows no sign of resolution. Geopolitical risks have risen, along with surging energy and food prices. The number of migrants continued to grow which made political landscapes shift rightward in many regions. We have also seen increased volatility in global financial markets that widened social gaps and economic inequality.

Meanwhile, generative AI has become widely integrated into both our society and industry, transforming the emerging technology into a new normal. In the US, President Trump has been re-elected, bringing with him a wave of new protectionist policies. The so-called "Trump tariffs" remain unresolved, contributing to continued disruptions in global trade and economic stability. The overall global outlook has become increasingly uncertain, as the US-led international order collapse and the world undergoes structural changes.

At the same time, climate change continues to intensify. Despite the current US Administration showing limited political will to tackle the issue, we are facing the reality of record-breaking heatwaves, torrential rains, drought-induced wildfires and rising sea levels that are threatening ecosystems worldwide.

We look forward to hearing your perspectives for these issues, and expect many fresh and forward-looking ideas to emerge from the young generation with tourism as the entry point.
