The US-Japan Relationship

New Challenges, New Opportunities for New Administrations

Objectives. This closed, one-day conference of Japanese and American experts from business, academia and think tanks is being convened to examine the economic and political realities that face the incoming governments in both Japan and the United States and to consider innovative ways and means to cooperate to mutual benefit, including opportunities for exercising joint leadership in the international economy. The expert participants limited to those who have direct experience with major issues in the relationship will review how the economic and political/military objectives of both countries in Asia, Europe and beyond can be accommodated while striving to create a 21st Century version of a "strategic partnership" between Japan and the US.

The conference will be aimed at providing practical, pragmatic analysis and an action agenda to be provided to both countries' governments, focusing explicitly on how to move from ideas to practical implementation by the two countries.

Introduction and Welcome

The point of departure for this conference is to identify, suggest and consider future priorities of new governments in Japan and the US. Dramatically new opportunities, as well as political and economic concerns in both countries and globally, demand a review of where US and Japanese priorities now converge, and thus where collaboration might produce practical results.

Session I: Political Relationship between Japan and US

Moderator: Naoyuki Haraoka, Executive Managing Director, JEF

This session will:

- 1 Review new opportunities and concerns facing the countries in light of current political and economic developments.
- 2 Examine contributions of the US and Japan to stability in East Asia and to global prosperity and peace. In this respect, how can we understand the mutual contributions offered by each country thus far and how can we expect these contributions and national objectives to evolve? What will be the impact for both countries and the world?
- 3 Consider, based on future national security and economic policy objectives, what ways and means are possible for both countries to develop relations with key third countries and regions (China, EU, others) in the context of building the strategic partnership that the US and Japan desire?
- 4 Joint use of non-military tools to fight terrorism and insurgency in countries of mutual concern.

Speakers: Amb. Shunji Yanai, Former Japanese Ambassador to the US; Kent Calder, Edwin O. Reischauer Professor, SAIS at John Hopkins University; Richard Dyck, President, TCS Japan KK; Amb. Rust M. Session III: Paths Forward - Conclusions and Action Agenda

Moderators: Kazumasa Kusaka, Executive Advisor, DENTSU, Inc. and Dana M. Marshall, Senior Advisor, Dewey & LeBoeuf LLP

In this final session, we will propose an action agenda, building on the conference discussions and identifying the most important and most urgent issues and seeking to establish joint Japan – US priorities. We will examine models for cooperation, including new government-to-government agreements, public-private partnerships, working with NGOs and other means.

We will consider how to showcase a new strategic relationship between the countries, making such a relationship more vital and useful for both countries and how it can help resolve global issues of mutual concern.

We will hear visions and specifics for a future strategic partnership from the President-elect's Transition Team, senior Tokyo representative and Congress.

The objective is to develop a forward-looking action agenda: ways and means to advance the conclusions of this conference with new governments in Japan and the US.

Speakers: Noboru Hatakeyama, Chairman & CEO, JEF; Amb. Karan Bhatia, Vice President and Senior Counsel for International Law and Policy, GE; Robert Fauver, President, Fauver Associates, LLC; Amb.
